11:15 AM	What is Your Why? Strategic Storytelling to Drive Systemic Change in Your Community
Andrew Palomo Yorri Berry	As a young person with lived experience, community-based provider, homeless liaison, or government official, you can drive systemic change at local, state, and national levels. The power of NN4Y's 47 years of history is our deep connection with youth with lived experience and community-based youth service providers. Together, we have been pushing to ensure that youth and young adult homelessness is an issue policymakers address. The roots of systemic change are found in everyday experience. The stories of people who have lived experience or are working in communities are vital to shed light on youth and young adult homelessness in the US. In this session we will craft our WHY and share why we continue to do this work.

BREAKOUT SESSIONS

1:45 PM	HOUSING TRACK: Specialized Services for LGBTQ+ Youth that Don't Violate Fair Housing Law
Lambda Legal Ali Forney Center	Some communities and providers struggle to provide specialized services to LGBTQ+ youth. They are told the name of the organization or their specialized services violate the federal Fair Housing Act (FHA). In this session participants will learn how LGBTQ individuals can be protected under the Fair Housing Act and how providers can continue to provide specialized support to LGBTQ youth without being in violation of FHA.

1:45 PM	INNOVATION TRACK: Going Beyond Diversity - How to Refocus Our Equity Work
Andrew Palomo Liam Spady	Organizations use the term "inclusion" in their everyday work, yet struggle with how to fully embed Justice, Equity, Diversity & Inclusion (JEDI) practices into their milieu. This session will have young leaders discuss how organizations can incorporate JEDI practices into their everyday work, how to build systems of accountability that translate intent to action, and how to transform systems authentically without tokenizing historically marginalized people.

1:45 PM	EDUCATION TRACK: FAFSA Fixes for Homeless and Foster Youth
SchoolHouse Connection	The FAFSA Simplification Act aims to remove many FAFSA challenges faced by youth experiencing homelessness or with experience in foster care. Most of these new provisions are in effect now (2023-2024 award year). High school seniors who complete the FAFSA are 63% more likely to enroll in higher education. As more states create FAFSA completion graduation requirements, students should be informed of all their options (e.g. career and technical education, community colleges, four year institutions). This presentation will provide a general overview for helping students experiencing homelessness fill out the FAFSA, review the new changes to the FAFSA, and offer strategies to help empower and excite students to plan out their future.

1:45 PM	YOUTH PARTNERSHIPS TRACK: Authentic Youth Partnership
New Beginnings A Way Home America Sasha Bruce	Not all engagement with youth is genuine. Often, adult-youth relationships suffer when adults struggle with who is in charge and who should be making decisions on youths' behalf. This session provides foundational knowledge around building and maintaining meaningful, intentional partnerships with youth who have lived experiences with homelessness. It also dives into adultism and how adult attitudes about youth can make or break their relationships with them. Attendees will learn about the core concepts of authentic youth engagement, as well as how to recognize their own biases that affect how they work with youth and how youth work with them.

BREAKOUT SESSIONS

3:15 PM	HOUSING TRACK: Trauma-Informed Practices in Youth Anti-Trafficking Housing Programs
Freedom Network	Housing is often the most immediate need of survivors as they exit trafficking situations. Survivors often rely on time-limited shelters, transitional housing, and rental assistance programs administered by anti-trafficking service providers to access safe housing. Historically, there have been practices employed by programs that restrict survivor autonomy by establishing prerequisites such as sobriety and limiting communication. Furthermore, once housed, some practices may resemble power and control dynamics of a trafficking situation, such as participating in required programming. This workshop will provide participants an overview of the housing landscape available to youth, trauma-informed practices, and how programs can provide services that center on survivor voice and choice.

3:15 PM Point Source Youth Oregon DHS	INNOVATION TRACK: Creating Direct Cash Transfers to End Youth Homelessness Direct Cash Transfer (DCT) initiatives are an anti-poverty strategy that puts money in the hands of people experiencing poverty. DCT is very new in the youth homelessness sphere and has been progressing due to young people's expressed need for cash to help them transition out of homelessness. The State of Oregon's Youth Experiencing Homelessness Program (YEHP) brought forward this initiative in early 2022 as a way to support young people in need of housing support. This session would allow participants to learn more about all aspects of a DCT program - from preparation and readiness, to implementation and funding - as well as hear directly from some amazing Young Leaders from Oregon who assisted in bringing this program to life.

People with lived experience are vital partners in ending homelessness. Learn how youth and young adults are creating systemic change throughout the country through local advocacy efforts. The speakers will inspire you with their strategies on organizing people with lived experience for advocacy. In this session, participants will learn how to leverage LCSCs to address the root causes of homelessness among young people and help to build strong collaborative relationships among youth-serving agencies, leading to improved youth outcomes and system functioning.
